

the physical structure and material substance of an animal or plant, living or dead.

the physical structure and material substance of an animal or plant, living or dead.

the trunk or main mass of a thing: the body of a tree.

Anatomy , Zoology . torso. the physical structure of a human being or animal, not including the head, limbs, and tail; trunk Architecture . the principal mass of a building.

the section of a vehicle, usually in the shape of a box, cylindrical container, or platform, in or on which passengers or the load is carried.

Nautical . the hull of a ship.

Aeronautics . the fuselage of a plane.

Printing . the shank of a type, supporting the face.

Geometry . a figure having the three dimensions of length, breadth, and thickness; a solid.

Physics . a mass, especially one considered as a whole.

the major portion of an army, population, etc.: The body of the American people favors the president's policy.

the principal part of a speech or document, minus introduction, conclusion, indexes, etc.

a person: She's a quiet sort of body.

Law . the physical person of an individual.

a collective group: student body; corporate body.

Also called heavenly body . Astronomy . an object in space, as a planet or star.

a separate physical mass or quantity, especially as distinguished from other masses or quantities.

This wine has good body. Wool has more body than rayon. consistency or density; richness; substance the part of a dress that covers the trunk or the part of the trunk above the waist.

Reference

Before and After Loss: A Neurologist's Perspective on Loss, Grief, and Our Brain \(A Johns Hopkins Press Health Book\)

Single-Case Research Designs: Methods for Clinical and Applied Settings