Middle School Nonfiction

Middle school English teachers are also introducing more nonfiction into the classroom. This shift is due to many states' adoption of the Common Core standards. According to these curriculum guidelines, around half of the materials students read should be nonfiction texts, including historical documents, essays, letters and memoirs. The inclusion of these texts is designed to help students prepare for what they'll encounter in college and the workplace.

The following texts are examples of the nonfiction reading suggested for middle school students by the Common Core:

'Letter on Thomas Jefferson'

The Great Fire

Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass and American Slave, Written by Himself

This Land Was Made for You and Me: The Life and Songs of Woody Guthrie

'Blood, Toil, Tears and Sweat: Address to Parliament on May 13,1940'

The Building of Manhattan

Harriet Tubman: Conductor of the Underground Railroad

Travels with Charley: In Search of America
