

Parent-Teen Therapy for Executive Function Deficits and ADHD: Building Skills and Motivation

*perÉ™-, Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to produce, procure" and yielding and derived words in diverse senses; possibly related to *pere- (2) "to grant, allot."

It forms all or part of: ante-partum; apparatus; apparel; biparous; disparate; emperor; empire; heifer; imperative; imperator; imperial; juniper; multiparous; nulliparous; oviparous; para- (2) "defense, protection against; that which protects from;" Parabellum; parachute; parade; parados; parapet; parasol; pare; parent; -parous; parry; parturient; poor; post-partum; preparation; prepare; primipara; puerperal; rampart; repair (v.1) "to mend, put back in order;" repertory; separate; sever; several; spar (v.); viper; vituperation; viviparous.

It is the hypothetical source of/evidence for its existence is provided by: Sanskrit prthukah "child, calf, young of an animal;" Greek poris "calf, bull;" Latin parare "make ready, prepare," parere "produce, bring forth, give birth to;" Czech spratek "brat, urchin, premature calf;" Lithuanian periu, perÄ-ti "to brood;" Old High German farro, German Farre "bullock," Old English fearr "bull."

Reference

Mastering the Semi-Structured Interview and Beyond: From Research Design to Analysis and Publication \(Qualitative Studies in Psychology, 18\)

Transforming Nursing Education: The Culturally Inclusive Environment