

Conducting Health Research: Principles, Process, and Methods

I put Dyson's Bane mask on my face This was the CES of putting things on my face. I spent time with the Magic Leap 2, Meta Quest Pro, Vive XR Elite and PSVR2 over the course of a few days. All of those products fit in the same bucket,

Samsung is holding its next Galaxy Unpacked event on February 1, teases camera improvements Samsung announced today that it's holding the next Galaxy Unpacked event on February 1 at 10:30 AM PT/1:30 PM ET. The company will expectedly announce the S23 series of phones at its first in-pe

Want the Nothing phone in the US? Be a beta Here's something that seems all but a guarantee: The way we purchase expensive electronics is going to change. Years after the U.S. began moving away from the carrier-based model of phone purchases,

Why the Matter logo was everywhere at CES 2023 AR/VR/MX took center stage at CES 2023. Automotive trends got a lot of love, as well, as did robotics and the metaverse. Heck, even pee-related gadgets had their moment to shine last week in Vegas. An

Wyze launches its new $34 pan and tilt security camera It's only been a few days since CES closed its doors, but there are still plenty of new gadgets to be had. Some companies, after all, would rather not launch their products into the noise that i

Apple's mixed-reality headset could arrive this year According to a report from Bloomberg's Mark Gurman, Apple is going to spend most of 2023 focusing on a brand new device " a mixed-reality headset that has been a work in progress for several year

Ecobee CEO and founder speaks to TechCrunch Live about CES, Nest and finding product market fit TechCrunch Live hosted a special, in-person event at CES featuring a long conversation with Ecobee CEO and founder Stuart Lombard. This was our first in-person TechCrunch Live, and I can't wait to d

Urine luck: These CES startups want to take a closer look at your waste You wait for years for a urine analysis company, then all of them hit their flow all at once. One of the notable trends at CES in Las Vegas this year was that the quantified-self movement is going dee

Did you hear? AnkerWork is going after the wireless mic market At CES in Las Vegas this week, AnkerWork announced its brand new AnkerWork M650 Wireless Microphone. It's a two-microphone kit that can be clipped (or magnetically attached) to your clothing. Pe

Ex-Apple team creates BlenderCap, a delightfully over-engineered portable blender Packing battery tech nobody uses in consumer devices and a half-horsepower motor, BlenderCap is one of the most ludicrously over-engineered products we've seen in a hot minute. At CES in Las Veg

P

After struggling with consumers, Magic Leap hangs its hopes on enterprise. Something wasn't working. In late 2020, Magic Leap announced a major change spearheaded by incoming CEO, Peggy Johnson. "What I found was nothing was really broken," she told the press at the Unistellar's telescope turns your smartphone into a stargazer. Humans are eternally curious about the night sky but figuring out how to use a telescope is non-trivial. At CES in Las Vegas, Unistellar believes it has the perfect solution with its Equinox 2 Smart T

At CES, this VR headset wears you hot on the heels from its $15 million fundraising just a few months ago, Brelyon showed off its vision for what immersive visuals could look like. At CES in Las Vegas, we tried out the 8K fully immersive

HTC's global head of Product on VR's race to the bottom. It was the year of XR. But then, they all seem to be, these days. Strong presences from Meta, Magic Leap, Sony and HTC led the way at this year's CES, with hundreds of startups picking up the rear.

The Soul of Blackleaf brings analog visualization to your music experience. File this one under style over substance, but damn if these speakers don't pack a whole lot of style into a small container. Under the amazing name Soul of Blackleaf, these stylish speakers use

When it's time for a steamy nooner, Steambox has you covered. If you have a particular hatred for the microwave or prefer your food to be heated gently when you're ready for lunch, Steambox is ready for your steamy lunch encounters. The company sold more than

The pen gets smarter as Nuwa shows off its smart ballpoint and app combo. We've seen a lot of companies trying to turn the humble pen into something a little more digital, but few have been as elegantly successful as Nuwa. The company showed off its smart pen at CES

This pepper spray will phone your friends as you mace your assailants. From the desk of "I'm not sure this is a good idea" at CES in Las Vegas, comes 444. The early-stage startup is planning to combine pepper spray with some electronics so a potential a

210.0015555556

Brane X portable speaker packs a hell of a punch in a small package You probably haven't heard of Brane Audio yet, but trust me on this one: You will. One of my highlights at CES in Las Vegas today was listening to the company's debut speaker, the Brane X,

Lumus shows off its tech in AR glasses that don't look too dorky AR tech sounds pretty cool, but nobody wants to be a glasshole. Today at CES, we checked out Lumus's bid to make AR glasses a little bit less cringe. The company creates technology that makes it

Load More

Reference

Asian Medical Industries: Contemporary Perspectives on Traditional Pharmaceuticals \(Needham Research Institute Series\)

Massage Therapy Research